FRIDAY, 13, Who says, 'Friday 13 is bad luck?' The Rebels turned the tables and stazed a tremendous rally to just slip pass the surprising New London Team. The crowd stood in suspense until the final gun sounded. The Rebs had defeated their rivals 48-47 in overtime play.

New London led 22-14 at the half in what looked liked a sure upset for them. But, the fired up Rebles scored 25 points in the all - important third quarter. At the end of the regulation game the score was 43-43.

Co-Captain, John Farrar led the Appomattox team with 33 points. A new-comer to the ARIS basketball circle, senior Doug Mitchell, scored only 2 points, but oh what they meant to the team. His points were the result of foul shots which came late in the contest.

The Appomattox girls up-ended the New London girls 40-29 in a very impressive showing of team work. Evvane Moore and Mary Libby Tolley led their team mates with 21 and 19 points respectively.

In afternoon games the Appomattox JV's romped the Amherst JV's 54 to 35. Gordon Bragg's boys were led by Harry Davis scoring 16 and Larry Guill and Carroll Goodrich each with 11.

The 8th Grade 'Baby Rebs' were downed 35-25 in a contest with Amherst. Michael George and Gene Price tallied 10 points each for the losers.

Select Toys Geared To Child's Interests And Capabilities

Since toys can be among the most influential gifts a child receives at Christmas, they deserve high priority when adult shopping time — and energy — is allocated.

Playtime Important

Shoppers should keep in mind that play is the serious business of childhood and toys are fundamentally tools which help children discover their capabilities and adapt themselves to the world around them.

This advice comes from Dr. Emma Sheehy, chairman of the Educator Advisory Committee of Toy Guidance Council, who notes that some toys highly entertaining to adults personally can be, and often are, a serious stumbling block when the grownups attempt to make a hasty eleventh hour choice for the children of their Yule lists.

To be of prime value, toys selected should fit the interests and capabilities of the child who will actually use them, Dr. Sheehy points out. Impulse buying is fine for some types of gift selection but toy purchases deserve thought.

Another drawback to last minute shopping is that the stocks of toys are depleted and often the playthings which would be most appropriate may be unavailable.

So plan well ahead to give prime attention to shopping for toys this Yuletide. Begin by drawing together accurate profiles of the youngsters on your gift list.

Check on Age

The first rule is to double check age legel and not to rely on memory. The cute toddler in that dog eared photograph can be a dedicated young scientist in a brief span of years. Adults who do not see a child frequently should be particularly vigilant in this area.

It is winning strategy for assistant Santas to take time to read up a bit on children's play interests at different age levels before they go shopping. It should be remembered that a balanced variety of appropriate toys can be a tremendous inspiration to every youngster in developing their capabilities and preparing for careers.

Safety is a first essential of a good toy and here age level plays a vital role. The toys purchased for babies require a careful double check to make sure that they have no rough edges or loose parts and that they are both safe for sucking and easy to keep clean, Dr. Sheehy said. The science set or tool that is safe for a school age child, would be an unwise gift for a kindergartner.

Common sense is a helpful guide to choosing toys that will be safe for a particular age. Many manufacturers indicate age interest on their box tops and instruction tags to provide guidance in this area.

The toy department can be a helpful shopping spot for teenagers as well as younger children on gift lists this year, Dr. Sheehy notes.

Toys for Teens

There is a wide range of science and hobby kits that are very interesting to teenages and also have a very educational value. Games keyed to teenage interests are another area where a wider than ever choice of suitable items is available for older children.

Particularly when substantial gifts are planned, it is a good idea to communicate with the parents to double check.

Of Welfare

...ces Medical Assistance ...e Aged Program

...Department of Wel... Institutions has an... plans for the medi... ...ge aged pro... ...ffect January 1, the program will be available to help cover costs of medical care and treatment of an estimated 30,000 eligible Virginians who are 65 years of age or over.

The Virginia General Assembly at its 1962 Session enacted legislation to provide medical assistance to low - income persons who generally have sufficient income to meet their needs except for medical care essential to their well - being. These persons are not public assistance recipients but are persons who are unable to finance large or unexpected medical expenses.

At its next session beginning in January, the General Assembly will be requested to allocate funds for the next biennium beginning July 1, 1964. State officials estimate that a total of $7,839,000 combined State, Federal and local funds will be needed for this period.

Last week the State Department of Welfare and Institutions scheduled a series of regional meetings for discussion of the policies and procedures established by the State Board for the operation of the program. The program as adopted by the State Board is based on the Kerr- Mills Bill, passed by the U. S. Congres in 1960. The Kerr-Mills Bill permits each state voluntarily to incorporate the plan and to adapt it to the state's own needs as long as it follows "certain basic federal requirements."

The State Board of Welfare and Institutions was authorized by the General Assembly to adopt such rules and regulations as may be necessary to make the plan workable in Virginia. The Department spent months in working out the program with aid and advice from the medical and pharmaceutical professions. The Department now feels that it has a plan that meets the basic federal requirements and is wider in scope than that being offered by some other states. The program is to be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State and is to be administered by local boards of public welfare in accordance with policies of the State Board.

A spokesman for the State Department siad recently, "Though this program we will be dealing with a group of people we previously have not known. These are the people who are not eligible for the usual public assistance programs or who do not choose to receive welfare aid. They do need financial aid, however, when faced with large medical expenses. This aid will prevent some cases from eventually having to rely on old age assistance."

A person will be eligible for medical assistance for the aged if he:

1. Is sixty-five years of age or older;

2. Is a resident of the State of Virginia;

3. Is not receiving any other type of public assistance;

4. Is in need of medical care or treatment within limitations prescribed by the State Board of Welfare and Institutions;

5. Is in need of financial assistance in defraying cost of such medical care or treatment;

6. Is not an inmate of a public institution except as a patient in a public medical institution;

7. Is not a patient in an institution for tuberculosis or mental disease or in other type of medical institution as a result of a diagnosis of tuberculosis or psychosis.

The following maxima have been placed on payment for medical care or treatment:

1. Physicians' services —$150, including services in home, office, clinic, within a fiscal year;

2. Dental care — $100 within a fiscal year;

3. Prescribed drugs —$150.00, furnished to hospital patients, not including discharge drugs furnished to hospital patients, within a fiscal year;

4. Hospitalization — 35 days within a fiscal year;

5. Nursing home care —60 days immediately following any one period of hospitalization within a fiscal year;

6. Nursing services provided by professional or registered practical nurses— 60 days within a fiscal year.

An applicant is responsible for the first $25.00 for expenses incurred for any one or a combination of physicians' services dental care, and prescribed drugs.

Application for assistance should be made immediately at the time of medical need by the recipient, his relatives, or his legal guardian. Applications will be accepted by the local department of public welfare after January 1. Each application will be studied for eligibility and acted upon by the Appomattox County Board of Public Welfare, according to Mrs. Hazel R. Moon, Superintendent of the Department of Public Welfare.

The best Christmas gift you can give your family is yourself. Please be careful in traffic during these dangerous December days. Last December, Virginia saw 111 traffic deaths.
